

Case Reports in Invasive Thoracic Surgery is a dedicated section of our journal that publishes high-quality, peer-reviewed clinical case reports highlighting diagnostic challenges, surgical innovations, and outcome-focused management of complex thoracic conditions. This section aims to disseminate real-world surgical experiences that contribute to clinical learning, technical refinement, and evidence-based practice in thoracic surgery.

We welcome reports that describe novel surgical approaches, rare pathologies, unusual complications, and challenging decision-making scenarios encountered in invasive and minimally invasive thoracic procedures.

Scope of the Section

This section covers, but is not limited to, case reports related to:

- Open and minimally invasive thoracic surgery
- Video-assisted thoracoscopic surgery (VATS)
- Robotic-assisted thoracic surgery
- Lung resections and pleural diseases
- Mediastinal tumors and cysts
- Esophageal surgical interventions
- Chest wall tumors and reconstructions
- Complex airway and tracheal surgeries
- Postoperative complications and their management
- Rare thoracic pathologies and surgical dilemmas

Article Types Accepted

- Clinical case reports
- Surgical technique-focused case descriptions
- Image-based thoracic surgical cases
- Unusual intraoperative findings
- Management of rare complications

Peer Review and Ethics

All submissions undergo a rigorous editorial and peer-review process to ensure scientific accuracy, clinical relevance, and educational value. Authors must comply with ethical guidelines, including informed patient consent and institutional approval where applicable.

Educational Value

This section serves as an important learning resource for:

- Thoracic and cardiothoracic surgeons
- Surgical trainees and fellows
- Pulmonologists and oncologists
- Clinicians involved in perioperative thoracic care
